Career Change Dogs

New Horizons will make every attempt to place our dogs into a good working environment, even if they do not become a full working service dog. They may be career changed into a different line of work.

These puppies have been raised to work and be a positive addition to the community. As such, we prefer to place them in a working environment over a pet home. They may become a therapy dog for a child with downs syndrome, a companion dog for an elderly shut in, or even a resident therapy dog in a nursing home.

The puppy raiser/trainer will not be given first option to adopt the dog back if he/she is excused from the program. This must be fully understood. Our primary goal is to place the dog where he/she will be of help to either an individual or into a group home where he/she will be a benefit to numerous people.

We do understand many people get very attached to the puppy they have raised. Many times we have been offered large donations in place of returning the dog. We have had to turn these down because we are not in the business of selling our dogs, after they have been career changed, to our puppy trainers.

There are extenuating circumstances where the puppy trainer may be able to adopt the puppy back due to medical issues or psychological issues; however, even these are not a guarantee the puppy raiser will be offered the puppy back.
